The History Council of NSW and Macquarie University proudly present two events to celebrate the centenary of International Women’s Day on 8 March 2011.

Symposium
The first march for International Women’s Day took place in New York in 1911. Australia’s first march occurred in 1928 but women had been demanding change a long time and across the world before then. This symposium will celebrate the many different activists and forms of activism that led to dramatic changes in Australian women’s lives over the course of the twentieth and twenty-first centuries.

Panellists include Jill Roe, Marian Sawyer, Diane Kirby, Carole Adams, Barbara Caine, Ann Curthoys and Lyndall Ryan

When: Tuesday 8 March 2011
1.30pm – 5.30pm

Where: Dixon Room, State Library of NSW

Cost: Free

RSVP: Friday 4 March 2011

Evening Lecture: The Next Hundred Years
The first wave thought the vote would do it, the second that laws and equal opportunities would solve the inequities but we are not there yet, wherever there is. On the one hand, we have made a lot of changes in the last hundred years but now we seem to be stalled. Do we need to rethink again?

On the centenary of International Women’s Day, the History Council of NSW and Macquarie University present this lecture by Eva Cox, well known academic and feminist.

When: Tuesday 8 March 2011
6.30pm – 8.30pm

Where: Museum of Sydney

Cost: $30.00 general, $25.00 HHT/HCNSW members and concessions

RSVP: 02 8239 2211 or www.tickets.hht.net.au
